Welspun Energy to set up research lab

Special Correspondent

Welspun Energy, on Tuesday, announced its plans to set up a research laboratory in partnership with Gujarat Energy Research and Management Institute (GERMI).

In a statement here, the company said the proposed laboratory would study different solar technologies and their performance in Indian terrain and climatic conditions. A MoU has been signed between Welspun Energy and P.D. University (PDU) in this connection recently. “Welspun Energy has been strengthening its research and study facilities. Results of these studies can greatly help the company in projects such as Welspun Energy in improving performance of their solar power projects,” it said.

The organisation will also be working closely with students. Welspun Energy will be offering various programmes to students of University’s Solar Programme. Welspun Co-Founder said solar energy industry in India was still young, with some amount of research and development, standardisation and technology selection. A student exchange programme had been initiated with the Singapore Management University, he added.
